What Haggadah do you use?

When I was growing up, our family used the same Haggadah every year. My father, of blessed memory, would always read the opening lines of the Silverman Haggadah: “Welcome to our Seder! Tonight we observe a most ancient, colorful, and significant festival. The Seder takes us back to those events which occurred more than three thousand years ago.”

Later in life I learned many people grew up with the Maxwell House Haggadah. When one purchased the coffee one also got a free Haggadah. When I perused this Haggadah as an adult, I was disappointed. It was bare bones with no interesting commentary. In fact, Rabbi Zalman Schachter-Shalomi (z”l) wrote a wonderful piece titled “Freeing the Seder from the Maxwell House Haggadah” which calls on Jews to be more involved with their Pesach Sedarim.

More than 3000 Haggadot have been printed. Rather than just containing the necessary elements, there are those that are beautifully illustrated, with commentary, instructions, and interesting additions. Each movement has a Haggadah. There are those geared for children. Some are edited by famous authors. There are feminist Haggadot, vegetarian Haggadot, and those geared to various stripes of social and political activists. And, of course, those you can download from the Internet.

Some choose to create their own Haggadah, piecing together texts from various sources. If done as a loose-leaf Haggadah, yearly updates can be added. As current events unfold, the pressing nature of whose plight we focus on at any moment changes. Many add a fifth cup as a call to action on a current issue. Recently there are Haggadot and supplements with specific foci: modern day slavery, Black Lives Matter, socially responsible chocolate, child hunger, and current refugees. Unfortunately, the need to call attention to modern day enslavements seems never to cease.

While the structure of the Seder remains the same, the need to keep the ceremony relevant for us today remains essential. That’s why there are so many versions of the Haggadah and so many supplements offered each year. We remember not only that we were slaves in Egypt but also that many in our world still remain in need of liberation.

May the Haggadah you use this year along with the supplemental readings you select make your Sedarim and your Pesach even more fulfilling, more meaningful and more liberating.

Help Repair Our World

Mayim Rabim's Mission Statement makes two references to social action and one to tikkun olam, the repair of the world.

Rabbi David Teutsch in his Guide to Jewish Practice describes Tikkun Olam as a Jewish value:

"We live in a world that is far from perfect. Judaism has always had a messianic vision of a world redeemed, a world characterized by justice, sufficiency, harmony, and peace. 'We cannot expect to complete the task of bringing the world to that ultimate redemption, but we are not at liberty to neglect the task' (Avot 2.16)... and each good thing we do makes a difference."

With these thoughts in mind I felt a deep disappointment and void that our congregation's Tikkun Olam committee wasn't active at the moment. So, I am volunteering to chair this committee. I would appreciate your help and ask you to join me so that together we can set priorities to establish plans and programs.

From Your Editor

Mayim Rabim's Tikkun Olam committee has a new chairman — Larry Gravitz. Hearing about the committee set me to thinking ...

Tikkun means 'repairing'; olam means 'the world'. Worthy acts of tikkun olam have broad, implicit, and beneficial impacts on the world, that is, the system we live in. Recognizing these implicit effects helps your editor choose her acts of tikkun olam.

Here's a quick example that has nothing to do with your editor —

A sobriety program housed near the new stadium has asked that the Vikings provide a sober tailgating area for sober tailgaters. A sober tailgating zone serves not just the sobriety program and other sober tailgaters; it serves the entire community.

An addict uses police services, collects social assistance money, ends up in an emergency room at taxpayers' expense, neglects his/her children who also use costly services and so on, and so on, and so on. A person who achieves sobriety doesn't spend the community's money on those services and may even pay taxes.

So, the sober zone explicitly helps some tailgaters and some addicts in recovery. Implicitly it saves each of us a few dollars not spent in policing, hospitals, etc. that may now be used for other important tasks

MAYIM RABIM CONGREGATION is affiliated with the Jewish Reconstructionist movement (www.jewishrecon.org). We are an urban Jewish community that comprises people of diverse ages, abilities, sexual orientations, cultural backgrounds, and financial resources. It is our mission to create and sustain spaces that enhance the practice of Judaism in the contemporary world; to that end, we are a house of prayer, of study, and tikkun olam (the repair of the world). As Reconstructionists, we view Judaism as an evolving religious civilization and claim a shared heritage with all Jews. Our synagogue is governed by an elected board of directors:

- Marc Lamm, President
- Sandra Levine, Treasurer and Finance Co-Chair
- Helen Romanishan, Secretary
- Celia Gershenson, Member At-Large
- Larry Gravitz, Member At-Large
- Jeremy Fisher, President Emeritus
- Sharon Stiefel, Rabbi
- Dana Fox, Congregational Administrator
- Isaac Kaufman, Membership; Barbara Nordstrom-Loeb, Ritual; Dana Fox, Finance Co-Chair
- Ron Giteck, Isaac Kaufman, Adult Programs
- Larry Gravitz, Tikkun Olam
